

Statement on Orlando Shooting

2 Comments / Statements / By David Blomstrom

It's only fair to share...

Every time an extraordinary act of violence makes headlines, the public's knee-jerk response is as predictable as Obama's next lie: Muslims. And the corporate media are usually quick to confirm that suspicion. The Orlando shooting, the Boston Marathon bombing, 9/11 and just about every airplane that's ever been hijacked or blown up have all been the handiwork of devious Muslims, so we're told.

My knee-jerk response to every new tragedy is very different: Jews, or Jewarchists for the politically correct.

Until quite recently, I would have thought that a clueless and racist statement. But I've been doing my homework, and I've learned that Jews are masters of conspiracy and terrorism. After all, they've been profiting from war for centuries.

Leave it to Wikipedia (aka WikiJew) to jump to conclusions. This is the first sentence of its article about Omar Mateen, the alleged Orlando shooter:

Omar Mir Seddique Mateen (November 16, 1986 – June 12, 2016) was an American mass murderer and domestic Islamic terrorist.

Jews and Muslims both have a motive for terrorism. For Muslims the obvious motive is revenge for the infinitely greater acts of terrorism committed against them. For Jews, terrorism is just a great way to make a buck. Both groups have a track record, though Muslim acts of terrorism are dwarfed by terrorist acts committed by the U.S. and Israel. Of course, Jews have profited from terrorism to a far greater degree than Muslims. The war on terror alone is costing U.S. taxpayers about a trillion dollars a year.

On June 12, 2016, Omar Mateen — a resident of Fort Pierce, Florida who had allegedly pledged allegiance to ISIS — allegedly killed 49 people at a gay nightclub in Orlando with an assault rifle, wounding at least 53 more. The media are calling it the deadliest mass shooting in the U.S. and the nation's worst terror attack since 9/11. More astute observers qualify it as the deadliest shooting in modern American history; we don't want to forget all the genocidal attacks against Native Americans and former slaves that make American history so intriguing.

I don't want to appear too flippant; the incident was an obvious tragedy for everyone who was in the line of fire, as well as their friends and loved ones. But the victims also include the countless U.S. Muslims who are now looking nervously over their shoulders as they try to go on with their lives. The victims further include millions of people in other countries who are anxiously wondering if the Orlando shooting will serve as the fuse for igniting the latest U.S. military invasion. An invasion of Iran — virtually promised by Hillary Clinton — will kill far more than fifty people.

Of course, politicians across the country are seizing the opportunity to demonstrate their compassion, their hatred of terrorism (spelled M-U-S-L-I-M), their renewed commitment to gun control, blah, blah, blah.

Many people attending prayer vigils are quick to point out that they don't hate Muslims. Yet that does little to comfort the Muslims who will become victims of the latest wave of retaliation by racist, brain-dead Americans.

Connect the Dots

It's too early to analyze this incident in any detail, but a simple look at the big picture immediately puts it in perspective. Keep in mind that ISIS is a creation of the U.S. and Israel, not Muslims. (Can you think of any notable ISIS attacks against Israel? Didn't think so.) The louder the corporate media scream Islamic Radicalism, the more I'm convinced the people behind this latest act of "terrorism" were Jews, even if the man who pulled the trigger was a Muslim.

Suppose the shooting really was perpetrated by just one citizen, a Muslim named Omar Mateen. Again, it's hard for us amateur sleuths and conspiracy theorists to shed much light on this story without more information. But consider the forces that warp Americans' minds, turning them into psychopaths.

When I was a child, there was no end of social watchdogs who were concerned about the endless violence on TV. In just one day, a young mind could watch dozens, if not hundreds, of people being shot, stabbed and lynched as cowboys battled Indians, GIs battled Nazis and law enforcement battled the bad guys.

Today it's worse, much worse. I threw my TV away years ago, sickened by the crap that passes for news and entertainment these days. But I occasionally glimpse TV programs while hanging out in WiFi cafes, and I'm simply astounded by the graphic violence and torture that is beamed into Americans' homes. Then there are the war games that millions of devotees play on Xbox and other gaming devices.

Of course, it's no secret that ISIS controls TV programming and also manufactures Xbox.

Just joking. Xbox is one of Bill Gates' money-making schemes, advertised on the jerseys of the Sounders, Seattle's tax-subsidized soccer team. Television, like all the media, is controlled by the Jews. The Jews also control Hollywood, and they have enormous control over the Internet.

U.S. citizens are probably the most brainwashed and dumbed down people on the planet, and their mentors are Jews, not Muslims. We may also be the most violent, militaristic race, rivaled primarily by Israelis.

Silence is Golden

In the wake of the Boston Marathon bombing, one of the Tsarnaev brothers was killed, and the other was injured in the throat so badly he couldn't speak. How convenient.

Of course, Dzhokhar Tsarnaev was kept under the tightest security and probably wasn't allowed to talk to many people other than specially vetted attorneys. For all practical purposes, he has been muzzled for life.

All we will ever hear about Omar Mateen will be similarly conveyed to us by corrupt politicians and the media. We have no way of knowing if a single word of it is true.

About that Vigil

Local media have given plenty of attention to a vigil held in Seattle's Cal Anderson Park — Words of Loss and Love Fill Cal Anderson Park During Vigil for Orlando Victims (Seattle Weekly), Photos from Seattle's Vigil for Orlando (The Stranger).

It's understandable that many people who attended those vigils were experiencing some emotional turmoil. But let's not drop our guard.

The vigil was also attended by some incredibly sleazy politicians (e.g. Governor Jay Inslee and Seattle Mayor Ed Murray). The vigil was covered by local media were real activists, then you probably believe all our lying politicians and media whores tell us about Muslims as well.

Of course, some — perhaps the majority — of the people attending the vigil were indeed just ordinary citizens, and it's nice that they cared enough about victims of a horrible crime in a distant state to attend a vigil. I just hope they're even more horrified by the far greater acts of violence that are playing out on the other side of the world.

Which begs a question: How many vigils have been held in liberal Seattle for the victims of America's endless wars of aggression? When's the last time the Seattle Weekly or The Stranger ran a story featuring photos of teary-eyed Seattleites expressing solidarity with the innocent people who are being systematically killed by unmanned drones or tortured at Guantanamo, along with an unknown number of secret torture sites around the world?

The Orlando shooting was a terrible event, but it can't even begin to compare to the more than one million Iraqis who were murdered by the U.S. military as part of its war against non-existent terror. It doesn't compare to the wholesale destruction of entire Syrian cities, spawning millions more refugees. Libya had the highest standard of living in Africa before it was destroyed by NATO, led by Obama, crushed like an insect. The only good thing to come out of that affair was an entertaining video of Hillary Clinton cackling with glee after learning about Gaddafi's brutal murder. (I call it good because it showed Hillary's true colors; Gaddafi was one of my biggest heroes.) And let's not forget all the innocent souls murdered by unmanned drones or the people who are being tortured at Team America's Guantanamo Bay facility in Cuba this very minute.

Gun Control

While many are seizing on the Orlando shooting to campaign for tougher gun control laws, I lean in the opposite direction.

Certainly, we need sane laws designed to minimize violence. But the people who run the U.S. clearly want to confiscate citizens' guns, and it isn't hard to figure out why. They want to be free to exploit us, rape us and, on occasion, murder us so they can blame our deaths on Muslims, justifying more erosion of our civil liberties (making us still weaker) and encouraging more wars, which are going to make a lot of rich Jews even richer.

For me, the question is simple: How are we going to defend ourselves against rogue cops and our increasingly fascist government if we're forced to turn in our weapons?

One of the many ironies is that Washington's last gun control initiative was backed by William H. Gates, father of the narcissistic geek who gave us Xbox. Another irony is the fact that father and son are co-captains of the Gates Foundation and therefore the world's most famous do-gooders, though neither one has a thing to say about the countless victims of war. Isn't it strange that millions of people think Bill Gates is a philanthropist, yet almost no one would describe him as a peace activist?

Summary

Do not misinterpret my words. I'm not saying the victims of the Orlando shooting got what they deserved or that everyone attending the Cal Anderson vigil was a paid actor.

All I'm saying is that I smell a rat. I do not believe the media's explanation of the Orlando shooting. I don't think there's anything genuine about Jay Inslee or Ed Murray; their presence at a peace vigil is frankly disgusting — like a couple pedophiles visiting a daycare center. I think the vigil at Cal Anderson Park was as phony as Bill Gates' philanthropy, even if many of the people in attendance were sincere and thought they were attending a genuine vigil.

I also think even attendees who were indeed sincere could and should do a little soul searching. Do you care half as much about the children being screwed in Seattle's public schools as you do victims of a shooting in distant Florida? Do you care about the millions of lives that have been ruined at the hands of the U.S.-Israeli terror machine? And are you going to jump on the bandwagon and blame this latest "terrorist" incident on Muslims while turning a blind eye to the Jewarchists who are profiting so richly from it?

If you think my words are disrespectful to the victims of the Orlando shooting, I couldn't disagree more. There's nothing respectful about lies and propaganda. If I was murdered by the Jewish Mafia, I wouldn't want a mob of supporters avenging my death by slinging mud at Muslims.

Update

June 14, 2016 — I just read that the Orlando shooter allegedly went postal because he was angry about the U.S. bombing his country.

In fact, there are millions of people around the world who are victims of U.S. imperialism, many who have suffered tragedies far worse than the Orlando shooting. Frankly, I'm amazed there haven't been more and bigger examples of blowback.

Of course, the sad thing is that the victims on both sides are almost always the innocent. If a Muslim who lost his home and family to NATO bombs assassinated a corrupt U.S. politician or blew up the headquarters of the Washington Post, Seattle Times or some Jewish tabloid, I'd drown my sorrow with an imported dark beer. (Weird; I hated beer when I was young but somehow got hooked on dark beer later in life.) But gunning down innocent people, even for a good cause, can throw would be supporters into a moral limbo.

In the meantime, Obama and Hillary are reportedly threatening to bomb ISIS in retaliation. But isn't that how this problem started in the first place? We created ISIS, then bombed it in one country and now find ourselves fighting it in multiple countries.

For any enraged Muslims who are thinking of taking up arms, I have a present for you: Jewarchy. Visit the website www.jewarchy.com to learn more about a magic word that I believe may be more powerful than bombs and missiles.

In October 2003, Malaysia's outgoing prime minister, Dr. Mahathir Mohamad, stunned the world with a courageous broadcast delivered at the opening of a 57-nation Islamic summit in Malaysia. He said Jews rule the world, aided by proxies who fight and die for them. He insinuated that Jews' most powerful weapon is "thinking."

So why can't the world's 1.3 billion Muslims defeat a few million Jews using that same weapon?

Mahathir's words drew blood as the Jewish-controlled White House echoed Israel in condemning Mahathir (Mahathir attack on Jews condemned, CNN; Mahathir, 10 years ago: Jews rule the world, The Jerusalem Post).

In 2014, two Malaysian airliners were lost. The first simply disappeared at sea, while the second was shot down by a missile over the Ukraine. Many conspiracy theorists think the planes were destroyed by Israel as a warning against the dangers of thinking.

In fact, a lot of mysterious plane hijackings and assassinations are oddly linked to the Jewish Mafia, as is ISIS.

Some people think the best way to survive is to bow down to their Jewish masters. But that will only make things worse; ask the Native Americans who bowed down to European colonists.

If we think of politics as a series of math equations, then murdering fifty innocent people in a Florida nightclub is hardly worse than the murder of countless thousands of innocent people in one Mideast country after another. But such attacks aren't necessarily logical. They can actually empower the U.S. political-military machine, rather than weaken it. Moreover, many people may conclude that you're no better than the U.S. trailer park trash that murder innocent people abroad.

I'm not anti-violence. I would love to see Obama tortured for the rest of his pathetic life at one of the secret torture sites he oversees. I think it would be funny as Hell if a courageous Muslim freedom fighter threw a bottle of acid in Hillary Clinton's face, in memory of all the Libyan children she arrogantly laughed at.

However, I often wonder why people resort to violence while ignoring more peaceful means of resistance that can be unbelievably powerful — like thinking.

You can see my contribution at www.jewarchy.com. Putting the word Jewarchy in dictionaries isn't going to turn Israel into a civilized nation or purge the global economy of Jewish bankers. But I guarantee it will throw a giant wrench in the Jewish propaganda machine.

So why aren't Muslims around the world talking about Jewarchy? Am I missing something, or have the Jews who control the Internet simply made it too hard to learn about this potent new word?

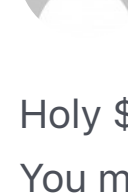

Earth to Muslims: Get a clue. I'm a U.S. citizen who's fighting back, virtually alone. If Muslims are too apathetic or stupid to get on board, then maybe they deserve to be dominated by Jews, just as stupid Americans have allowed Jews and corporations to control their lives from cradle to grave.

As one of my favorite Jews, Carl Sagan, said, don't sit this one out.

Holy $@&¥%
You might have the strangest set of beliefs I've ever come across in a scientist. Holocaust denial, antisemitism, opposition to the wars, the whole bundle! But for the sake of this post I will only deal with a few.
a. Xbox is a Jewish contraption brainwashing our population with war games? What? My children own a PS4 and many of the games are shared. I personally play games on an Oculus Rift and a PC. I despise shooters.
b. One of my very best friends is Jewish, and right now he is working as a volunteer in Africa bringing aid to underprivileged villages and building wells. He is the most selfless person I know, and to top it all of, one of the poorest. He barely makes enough to pay off his student loans. Farewell for now.

What kind of scientist are you? What do you study? I'm frankly not impressed by your comprehension skills or sense of logic.

Holocaust Denial

Please point out the passage you read that made you think I'm a Holocaust denier. There are many details of the Holocaust that I question, just as I question the official accounts of 9/11, the invasion of Iraq and on and on. Anyone who believes our lying government or an army of media whores is a fool.

I've also noted in various writings that various people do deny the Holocaust for a variety of very plausible reasons. However, I think the Germans did persecute Jews. In fact, I've been working on an article about the Holocaust. I hope to have it online at https://www.geobop.com/holocaust soon, possibly later today.

Antisemitism

That's utter rubbish; I have no quarrel with Arabs whatsoever.

Opposition to the Wars

Now you've really gone off the deep end. Am I really to understand that you have a beef with one war but multiple wars?

OK, I'll bite: Which wars do you support?

- The invasion of Iraq in a futile search for weapons of mass destruction that never existed, leading to an ongoing slaughter that killed over a million people years ago?
- The invasion of Afghanistan in a quest to kill some mythical goatherders who plotted 9/11 in a cave high up in some rugged mountains, with countless thousands of civilians dead and a few million refugees as collateral damage?
- The horrendous carnage in Syria, which was attacked by multiple countries, including the U.S., UK, France and Israel, not to mention ISIS, which appears to be an extension of Israel?
- The murder of innocent Pakistanis by unmanned drones?
- The destruction of Libya — a country that boasted the highest standard of living in Africa?
- The continuing rape of Somalia, whose fisheries have been decimated by nuclear waste?

If there's some really wonderful, scientifically sound war going on that intelligent people should cheer for, please speak up. I'd like to know about it.

Xbox

You wrote, "Xbox is a Jewish contraption brainwashing our population with war games?"

Stop making things up. I never called Xbox a Jewish invention.

And yes, young minds are being polluted by war games which are indeed commonly played on Xbox.

Friends in Africa

You wrote, "One of my very best friends is Jewish, and right now he is working as a volunteer in Africa bringing aid to underprivileged villages and building wells. He is the most selfless person I know, and to top it all of, one of the poorest. He barely makes enough to pay off his student loans."

What a coincidence. I spent some time in Africa long ago, and I had a friend who also did volunteer work in Africa. He came from a pretty wealthy family, though he wasn't Jewish. I thought he was a little spoiled, but he seemed like a pretty decent guy overall.
